Why LinkedIn?

As of 2nd August 2012 LinkedIn reported it had 175 million+ professionals members in over 200 countries and territories around the world.
They surpassed 5.3 billion professional-oriented searches in 2012.

That alone should be enough to get you thinking about adding LinkedIn to your marketing strategy.

But more than that, LinkedIn has some unique features to get you and your business / brand seen by your target market.

Firstly LinkedIn is very SEO friendly. Make your profile nice and keyword rich and you could very well find your LinkedIn profile at the top of google!
Secondly it is a great Lead generation tool. Join or start groups to tap into the huge community of users who are looking for professional advice.
Thirdly, it increases your brand visibility and won't eat up half the time you spend on facebook or twitter. An hour a day making connections, commenting in your groups and posting interesting updates will be enough for you to grow a huge base of connections and catapult your business.

There are many more reasons, including the very visible social proof on your profile page in the form of endorsements and recommendations, the fantastic facility to showcase your experience, talents and expertise, the ability to add business pages with featured products, create huge targeted groups and loads more!

Excited? You should be, let me show you how simple all this is to setup.

Getting Started

Setting up an account on LinkedIn is easy and free. Just go to www.linkedin.com and follow the instructions.

What we’re going to cover over the next few pages is how to create your perfect profile.
Get this right and you’re over halfway to having a fantastic LinkedIn presence, which will open up your business to yet another big new network of people.
Why Your Profile is So Important

1st Impressions count

The whole point of LinkedIn is to make connections and engage with those connections in a meaningful way. Unlike facebook & twitter where your profiles are based on the content you’ve been sharing, LinkedIn is very much more focused on who you are, what you do, what you can do for others and your experience and expertise.

Remember LinkedIn was originally setup as a recruitment network and still is the top recruitment network on the web. Therefore your profile is like your resume. You are in effect telling people why you are the ideal candidate for them.

Now transfer that into the B2B world and the effect is just as powerful. Someone types my name or does a search for Social Media experts and the first thing they land on is my ‘resume’. A full page telling them why I’m the ideal person to teach them how to run their social media campaigns.

The result: a connection, a contact, engagement, a customer.

SEO friendly

As I said in the introduction, LinkedIn is very SEO friendly, so utilising your profile to add relevant keywords may well get you found on the first page of google.

You must remember though that google is changing it’s algorithms all the time and moving much more towards social proof. So you need to add to your keyword rich profile; great engagement, lots of likes, endorsements, recommendations and connections.

Keyword stuffing may work in the LinkedIn search (and it does), but it won’t hold much weight on it’s own in google rankings anymore.

Thankfully by the end of this guide you will know exactly how to get more social proof to assist your SEO endeavours!

Positioning

Creating a benefit driven summary, showcasing your experience and expertise, plus adding your specialities and skills (plus a few more great tips I’m going to be giving you), will begin to position you with credibility and authority in your industry or niche.

Add to that the all important social proof element and it won’t be long before you will have positioned yourself as the go to expert in your particular arena.

Now before you start thinking this is beyond your reach or sounds too much like hard work, LinkedIn lends itself beautifully to building up connections and getting that social proof quickly and easily and it all starts with an awesome profile!
Your Profile

So here’s what we’re going to be looking at in this report;

1. Your Photo
2. Name / Headline
3. Personalising Your URL
4. The Summary & Specialities
5. Your Experience
6. Projects
7. Skills & Expertise
8. Education
9. Recommendations
10. Additional Info
11. Groups
12. Posting Status Updates
13. Start Connecting
14. What’s Next

Each section is short, to the point and has graphical instructions. It’s well worth putting aside an hour to create a fantastic profile and start generating leads from LinkedIn today!
Your Photo

Quite possibly the most important element of your page. LinkedIn is not Facebook. It’s a different market.

So leave those photos of you with your puppies, cartoon characters or quirky messages to FB.

What you need on LinkedIn is a nice clean professional headshot with a lovely big smile.

If you think you have a face for radio SMILE! A great smile will make you look and feel better!

Please, please brush your hair, put on a bit of make up ladies and wear something appropriate. That dodgy photo of you in your hoody on a windy hill won’t do!

You’re trying to create a great first impression here and it’s a nice big image that pops up right at the top of your profile, so make it good. In fact, if you can afford it, at some point I would recommend getting professional photos done, not only for LinkedIn, but for your entire Social Media / blog presence. But, it’s not necessary.

A clean shot, in good lighting and with a groomed appearance is enough to make a great first impression and for people to want to read on and find out more about you.

Your Name / Headline

I know this sounds obvious but your name needs to be Your Name. Once you have created your LinkedIn profile you can set up business pages, just as you can on Facebook. So don’t set up your personal profile and call it your business name.

LinkedIn is about connections between professionals. So if you’re a CEO of a company hell bent on hiding behind your brand, it’s time to step out of the shadows and introduce the business community to YOU!

People do business with people they know, like & trust. Heard that one before? Of course you have.

Directly under your name is your first opportunity to add some keywords. However, please ensure they’re relevant and don’t keyword stuff. I’ll be elaborating a bit more on that when we get to the Summary section.
Your headline is your opportunity to grab people’s attention and you have seconds to do that, so you need to make it catchy and relevant to their search.

Here’s some example headlines to give you some inspiration.

Making social media simple for small business • Social Media Strategist • Social Media trainer & speaker

Facebook Marketing Expert Author & Trainer | Social Media Speaker | Relationship Marketing Specialist

Personalise Your URL

When you first create your profile, LinkedIn will give you a URL which is stuffed with numbers and is not attractive.

To increase the chances of people finding you and give you the ability to post attractive links across all the other social media platforms make sure you personalise your URL asap.

It may also help with google rankings. Not a lot, but every little helps!

Here’s how you claim your personalised URL;
Your Summary & Specialities

OK, here we go! This is the part you’re going to want to spend some time on. This is your chance to showcase your talents, your experience, how you can help the visitor and add some relevant keywords to help you get found.

Your summary needs to introduce you, give you credibility and tell the visitor what they will get by connecting with you, clicking through to your web page, joining your group etc etc.

If you can get your summary right you will find it much easier to create connections and build that all important social proof!

So before I show you how to do it, let’s look at some good and bad examples;

I think they speak for themselves. Just ask yourself, which ones would you want to do business with?

Here’s how to write a fantastic summary;

1. Begin with a brief introduction to you and what you currently do / offer
2. Follow up immediately with how you can help the visitor (always write as if you’re speaking to one person - the person visiting your profile)
3. Add some credentials. Why you’re the best person to help them with this particular issue. What others have said etc.
4. Offer a free gift - this link will lead to an optin form
5. Add a personal paragraph, so they can get to know the person behind the business
6. Add a list of your specialities - add some great keywords here!

As you’re writing your summary please remember your objective at all times. You are trying to compel people to connect with you, contact you and / or engage with you.
Is your summary compelling enough?

Have you looked at other profiles in your niche and surveyed their summaries?
How can you make yours better, more benefit driven, more compelling?
Spend some time here, it will pay you dividends!

Your Experience

As we move down your profile you now have many more opportunities to showcase your expertise starting with your experience.

I see many people simply listing past jobs. Don’t do this. Make this relevant and keyword rich.

Unless you’re looking for a job I suggest you don’t list every position you’ve ever held since leaving school.
I'm fairly sure my stint as a Butlins Redcoat (holiday camp entertainer for those not familiar with Billy Butlin) will not influence someone to do business with me. In fact it may even put them off! :)

Use this section to list your jobs or experience that is relevant to what you’re offering now. See mine as an example. Click Here to View my Profile. Note that I’m actually using my various current activities as my experience and I have only included what I feel is relevant about my background.

Make sure you add a decent job description with plenty of keywords to make your profile even more interesting, relevant and searchable.

Projects

I love this one! This is an opportunity for you to open up and tell people what you’re working on!
Perhaps you’re writing a book, planning a new course, organising a webinar or event, building some new software, launching a new product line.
Whatever it is, add it to projects, add some great and relevant keywords and lots of anticipation and excitement!
This is a chance to get people excited about your business and showcase your innovation!
Here’s how to add projects;

Fill out the blanks and click Add Project!
Skills & Expertise

LinkedIn have recently put this section on steroids! What's great about adding your skills & expertise is, once again it's a fantastic opportunity for you to use relevant keywords. However, very recently LI introduced endorsements. You may have seen them if you have a LinkedIn account already.

When you add skills and expertise now people get the opportunity to endorse you for each or every one. So if someone truly believes you are an expert in one or more of your skills all they have to do is click a button and their face will pop up next to your keyword giving you that all important social proof!

Here's the best bit, all you have to do to start getting endorsements is get out there and endorse others.

It's the law of reciprocation. As soon as you endorse someone they will get a notification and they will be asked if they want to endorse you.

Now, please note, if you are not an expert in any of the areas you have included and have absolutely nothing to back it up, this isn't going to work.

I'm writing this presuming you have a level of expertise in the industry or niche you are promoting.

This is how endorsements look on your page.
Powerful stuff!
So make sure your summary looks great, make sure you have posted plenty of relevant information and get out there and start endorsing!

Education

Now this is an interesting one. Remember at the beginning I spoke about your profile being like a resume? Well this is a prime example. Where else do we want to tell people where we went to school?

The main reason for wanting to include your education is that it can help you find old friends and colleagues. If this is important to you and your business, then adding your schools and colleges is a great way of you finding friends and them finding you from a professional point of view.
Not only a positive way to get your recommendations campaign off the ground, but also a great door opener to build your connections.

Recommendations

Social Proof, Social Proof, Social Proof!

Recommendations on LinkedIn are your testimonials. Testimonials from people who have worked with you, for you, have bought your products / courses, are a customer or even a subscriber of yours.

Anyway that someone is positively associated with you is an opportunity for a recommendation.

Just like endorsements, the best way to get recommendations is to give them. However, don’t expect someone you have recommended to come back and do the same for you.

I know I will only ever recommend someone who I have actually worked with or who I have first hand experience of their work or services.

But you won’t get anywhere if you don’t get out there and altruistically start recommending others. In fact to ensure your profile is 100% complete you need to start by recommending three others.

Recommendations don’t have to be long. Just true!
Here’s an example of some of mine. I read somewhere that you should be looking to get 10 - 20 recommendations as a rule of thumb to give you credibility.

I say that’s a load of tosh! If you have 3 or 4 fantastic recommendations from very happy customers, that would be enough for me to want to get to know you and I imagine for many others!

Additional Info

This is an updated part of the profile and where before you had the option to add three customised web addresses, you can now add anything you like!
So take the few minutes it takes to customize this section. Here’s how;

Groups

This is an interesting one. There is contrarian advice out there from the long in the tooth LinkedIn ‘experts’.

Some say join 50 groups, which is the maximum you are allowed to join on LI. Some say just join 2 or 3, there is no way you have the time or resource to join and engage with 50.

Whilst I agree we don't have the time or resource to converse with everyone from all 50 groups, it’s very easy to share solid and valuable content with all or just some of your groups.
I have certainly found that the more groups I have joined and shared information with (non spammy of course), the more connections I have made. I then go and engage with different groups on different days / weeks and the most active participants soon show up, so you pretty quickly know where to spend your time.

So, I'll leave it up to you, but personally, I would start out by going for a few relevant groups with large member bases. Join in, engage and grow your group membership from there.

The objective of groups being to get your content in front of your target market, strike up relationships, attract people back to your profile and ultimately back to your offers, products or services.

So don't do things just for the sake of it. Take action with purpose, always knowing what your end goal is.

I'm just scraping the tip of the iceberg here with groups. LinkedIn groups really are THE lead generation strategy on LI. Both joining other large communities and of course starting your own.

Here's how to find and add groups to your profile;
Start Posting Status Updates

Your activity section shows what you have been up to. Have you been recommending others, connecting with people, publishing content?

Utilise your status update just as you would facebook or twitter to post interesting and relevant information that you believe your connections would like and benefit from.

There are no hard and fast rules for how often you should post. There are many opinions and I have mine also, but they’re no good to you as every market is different.

The goal here is to get likes and comments. Everytime someone takes an action on your content it shows to their connections, opening the door for more invitations to connect for you.

You need to test reaction and engagement. So start by posting once a day and test different times.

Then as you begin to notice a pattern, you can test posting twice a day, three times day, twice a week even. It’s really going to depend on your market, what they’re used to seeing, when they’re online and how relevant and interesting your information is.

Here’s my Top 10 Tips for Maximum Engagement on all the Social Media platforms;
1. Create relevant and interesting content
2. Be Consistent
3. Show interest in other people’s content by commenting and engaging
4. Be inclusive - share other people’s content
5. Reply to comments on your posts
6. Spend time getting to know people and networking
7. Go out of your way to answer questions and solve problems
8. Stay ahead of the game in your niche and give regular updates of new news
9. Never begin a relationship by selling
10. Be engaging!

Start Connecting!

Congratulations! You have just created a fantastic profile that will attract and entice potential customers, business partners and opportunities your way!

Now your profile is ready it’s time to get connecting. There are several benefits to having lots of connections, but the main one is to get people off of LinkedIn and onto your email lists.

The more connections you have, the more people you can get your content and profile in front of.

It also comes back to that old saying though, people do business with people they like, know and trust.

The more connections you have, the more credibility and authority you will build within your area of expertise.

Creating and building connections is a whole subject all on it’s own, but to get you started here are my Top 10 Tips;

1. Create an awesome profile!
2. Reach out to friends & colleagues who you already know to get you started
3. Go to the home page and on the right you’ll see People You May Know - click on See More and start connecting!
4. Ask people you trust to introduce you to people you would like to connect to
5. Always send a personal message when requesting a connection
6. Join groups - you’ll meet and network with loads of potential connections
7. Use the import tool to import contacts already in your email accounts
8. Click on Contacts in the nav bar and Add Connections, then select your email account.
9. Add a Connect with Me on LinkedIn message to your email signatures
10. Put your profile links on your blog / websites / articles etc
11. Make your profile more attractive my recommending and endorsing others
12. Engage with people and they’ll want to connect with you!

What’s Next?

Here’s what I want you to do next;

1. Follow this guide (if you haven’t already) and take an hour or so setting up a great profile. It will be a great use of your time!
2. Get out there and start making connections
